

Tue, 30 Jun 2020

Parathyroid adenoma and hypercalcaemia in a patient presenting with recurrent nephrocalcinosis

Abstract

Recurrent nephrocalcinosis and urinary tract calculi secondary to parathyroid adenoma is rarely identified and documented in the developing countries. Inadequate evaluation can lead to a missed diagnosis and unfavourable outcomes.

We report a case of a 27-year-old Nigerian man who presented with recurrent unexplained urinary tract calculi.

Keywords: hypercalcaemia, parathyroid adenoma

Main Text

Abstract

Main Text

Introduction

Case Report

Discussion

Conclusions

References